

Eleven Plus Help

Are you an Asian parent who struggles to understand what your child is learning for the 11 plus?

Do you want to help your child with studying but feel that language barriers are holding you back?

Then the Extra Tuition Centre may be able to help!

Children from different ethnic backgrounds need to practice English at home to do better in school. But this is not always possible if their parents are not good at English themselves. This often creates a rift, as cultural differences between home and school have been known to alienate children and their parents from talking about school studies. Examination times, such as the 11 plus, can be especially stressful, as this is when some children need the most help. The reality of the situation is this: parents struggling to understand the Eleven Plus could end up holding their children back.

The Extra Tuition Centre is providing parents with the opportunity to work with their children and to help them to be active participants in their children's education. Qualified teachers who speak Punjabi, Hindi, Gujarati and Urdu will be available to translate to parents exactly what their child is learning and how they can help them. Parents will also get an insight into how their children study, the practical assessments they undergo and help with the textbooks they use. Parents will learn about the nature of the Eleven Plus, and this knowledge will allow them to help their child more confidently in the long run.
